Dedication

Marc Splaver

Unfortunately, whenever special people are taken from us prematurely, they rarely have time to leave behind any mementos or remembrances of their achievements. It usually is left for others to acknowledge their accomplishments.

Happily, this is not the case with Marc Splaver, the Bullets' popular public relations director whose promising future was snuffed out by leukemia May 3 at George Washington University Hospital.

The Bullets' management, friends and members of the media are very fortunate to have the perfect keepsake, the ideal reminder of what a clever, imaginative, innovative, humorous, nice guy Marc Splaver was.

His legacy is his press guide, something he put his complete devotion to his profession, to his team and to his friends into each year. There are 22 such publications produced every season in the National Basketball Association, but there never was a doubt about whose was the best, the most informative, the easiest to read, the one worth saving. It was Marc's every time.

Marc would have loved putting this guide together, this odyssey of a championship season. It was something he had dreamed about, hoped of, worked for since joining the team. It, undoubtedly, would have been his masterpiece.

But Marc is gone and his touch in this book—naturally, dedicated to him—already is missed. Fortunately, because he worked so hard, because he had such pride in his profession, because he was one of the best, he has left us all legacies we can hold and cherish.

Thanks, Marc, we needed that.

ON THE COVER

Before the first playoff game in San Antonio, Dick Motta turned on his hotel room television set. What he heard was a sportscaster relate the upcoming Bullets'-Spurs' series to an opera—it wouldn't be over until the fat lady sang. Cautioning Washington followers of overconfidence in the Eastern Conference finals against Philadelphia, he said "The opera ain't over 'till the fat lady sings." Little did he know he had just created a saying that would be picked up by every Bullets' fan. The cover drawing is a 1978 copyright of the Shirt X-plosion.

Abe Pollin

Abe Pollin
Chairman of the Board
Capital Centre

President
Washington Bullets

When the Washington Bullets were crowned 1978 NBA World Champions, the man who brought professional basketball to the Nation's Capital realized his dream. Chalk up another victory for Abe Pollin. Another accomplishment of major proportion had come his way.

To the uninformed, it would seem that the Bullets world championship was just another in a series of events that have made many think everything Pollin touches automatically turns to gold.

Don't believe it. The reason Abe Pollin is successful is not luck. The key to his accomplishments is that he's a person who does not believe the word "impossible" exists. To him the impossible is simply a matter of a little patience and a lot of hard work.

When Pollin wanted to move his basketball team from Baltimore to his adopted home town of Washington, he had hoped that an arena would be built in which the Bullets would be a tennant. So he waited, but nothing happened. Finally, when he could wait no longer he broke ground himself in a Landover, Md. soybean field. At the time he said, "We will play NBA basketball here in 15 months." As Washington suffered through the rainiest winter in its history, even workers at the construction site said "No way! Completion of the arena on schedule is impossible." On December 2, 1973, virtually 15 months to the day after groundbreaking, the Bullets beat Seattle 98-96 as the Capital Centre was dedicated.

Shortly before he decided to build the Capital Centre, Pollin had commissioned a feasibility study on a privately owned arena in the Washington area. He was told it could work if he had a hockey team to go along with basketball. Loaded with a briefcase full of facts, figures and surveys, Pollin went to apply for an NHL expansion franchise. At the time, Jimmy the Greek was quoted as saying, "Not quite impossible. I'll give 600-1 odds against Washington." There are probably a lot of people wishing they'd taken that bet—today the Washington Capitals are playing their fifth NHL season.

RINGTHEBELL on Archive.org

The league's 18 owners told NBA Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien they could never agree on a major decision like the question of merger with the ABA. So O'Brien went to the man he knew could pull it off—Abe Pollin. In the pre-dawn hours of a June 1976 morning, the owners voted 17–1 in favor of the merger. "The key to the whole thing was for everyone to put aside their own personal selfish interests for the good of the game", he said at the time.

Personal selfishness is something Pollin knows little of. Despite the rigors and time demands of his Capital Centre business, he seldom refuses to lend his energy to charitable projects. In 1976 the Hebrew Academy honored him as its "Man of the Year". His father, Morris, had earlier been given the honor and thus, they became the first father and son to be so recognized. This past summer at the Washington Touchdown Club's "Bullets' Salute", he received a plaque as the Leukemia Society's "Sportsman of the Year".

Pollin has dedicated himself to raising funds for a sports and convocation center at American University in tribute to Marc Splaver, the Bullets' P.R. Director who died of leukemia in May. This sort of feeling is not unusual for a man who calls his employees the "Capital Centre Family". He is not your typical owner. He calls his people by their first names and knows a lot about their personal lives too. Their problems often become his own.

He is indeed an unusual man who is respected by all who know him. Only an unusual man can remain gracious and humble while accomplishing great things. Only an unusual man refuses to acknowledge the word impossible.

Pollin and his wife, Irene, who is a practicing psychologist, live in Bethesda, Md. They have two sons, Robert, 28, and Jimmy, 20.

Jerry Sachs

President
Capital Centre

Executive Vice President
Washington Bullets

CLASSIC BULLETS
Archive.org

If you ask anyone who works at the Capital Centre to name the busiest man in the organization, you would probably get a unanimous answer—Jerry Sachs.

Sachs oversees every facet of the Centre's daily operation from checking on concessions to coordinating the scheduling of the close to 300 events that play the arena each year. No wonder that Abe Pollin has said of his top man, "Jerry Sachs is my right arm and he's my left arm. He's the force that runs the whole organization."

When an arena like the Capital Centre runs as smoothly as it does, there are reasons. Abe Pollin is certainly No. 1 and Jerry Sachs No. 2.

In the five-year existence of the Capital Centre, the arena has hosted nearly 1,300 events and become one of the top grossing concert halls in the United States. It has been the site of two World Heavyweight Championship fights (Ali-Young, Ali-Evangelista) and the only non-North Carolina home of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament in more than 20 years. Every recognizable name in the music industry, from the Rolling Stones to the Mormon Tabernacle Choir, has entertained Capital Centre audiences.

A native of Baltimore, Sachs has been associated with Pollin and the Bullets since 1970 when he became the team's General Manager. Upon becoming the President of the Capital Centre in 1973, he relinquished that spot to Bob Ferry, but has remained involved with the club as its Executive Vice President.

Sachs came by his administrative experience the hard way—by working up the ladder. He began his career in sports as a non-salaried public relations assistant for the Baltimore Orioles in 1959. By 1962 he had become the team's P.R. Director. After three years in that capacity, he left the Orioles to join the Atlanta Braves as head of their public relations, advertising and marketing programs. In 1970, he became associated with Coca-Cola as its Coordinator of Sports Activities, a position he held until joining the Bullets.

The 43-year-old Sachs and his wife, Joyce, live in Bethesda, Md., with their children, Gene (16) and Barbara (12).

Bob Ferry

General Manager

It takes a lot of wheeling and dealing to put together a championship team and there is no question that Bob Ferry is chiefly responsible for piecing together last year's National Basketball Association champions.

Ferry became General Manager of the Bullets in the summer of 1973, just after the franchise was moved from Baltimore. Of the 12 players who came to Washington that season, only three remain: Wes Unseld, Elvin Hayes and Phil Chenier.

Through clever trading, perceptive scouting and intelligent drafting, Ferry assembled the best team in basketball last season.

While other teams take years to rebuild and stumble to losing records in the process, the Bullets have taken on a youthful appearance without disrupting its string of 10 straight playoff appearances.

Although the Bullets perennially are among the top finishers in the league and therefore usually select late in the draft, Ferry's choices have been brilliant. All told, he has selected 25 players who have spent at least a year in the NBA.

Three years ago, he selected Kevin Grevey, who has developed into one of the best shooting guards in the league. Two years ago, he picked Mitch Kupchak and Larry Wright and they both have been prominent in the Bullets success. Last year's choice was Greg Ballard, who has the potential to be one of the best all-around forwards in the league.

A 10-year veteran of the NBA, Ferry was a standout center at St. Louis University and the No. 1 draft choice of the St. Louis Hawks in 1959. He later played at Detroit and Baltimore. Bob Ferry stands for success. In his 19 year NBA career as a player and administrator, he has been associated with playoff teams 16 times.

The 41-year-old Ferry lives with his wife Rita and their three children Laura (17), Bobby (15) and Danny (12) in Bowie, Md.

Dick Motta

Coach

He's cool when others are excited, he's hot when others are calm. He doesn't volunteer a lot of information, but when asked, he's honest and candid. He's Dick Motta, one of the most successful coaches in the National Basketball Association.

He finally reached the pinnacle of his profession last June when he guided the Washington Bullets to the NBA championship. He didn't have the best players, he didn't have the homecourt advantage, but Motta managed to direct his troops to surprising victories over divisional champions San Antonio and Philadelphia, then win the all-important seventh game at Seattle, breaking the Sonics' 22-game winning streak at home.

"What made the championship so great was that we weren't suppose to win it," he said after that memorable 105–99 triumph. "We came a long way. Most people didn't give us a chance, but I felt all along we could. I really did."

Nobody came further or took longer to reach that moment than Motta, who began his coaching career at Grace Junior High in Idaho in 1953 and never even saw an NBA game until he coached in one 10 years ago.

The youngest son of an Italian truck farmer in little Midvale, Utah, didn't even make his high school basketball team, but now he stands third among all NBA coaches in total victories with a career mark of 448.

The Bullets' success last season was a victory for the coaching profession. Motta never had the size nor the ability of Doug Moe, Billy Cunningham or Lenny Wilkens, yet when it came down to making the tough decision in the tenseness of the playoffs, he came out on top.

Motta has a basic philosophy which he says he used to win the state high school championship in Idaho in 1959 and still employs.

"Offensively, I want to attack the other team inside," Motta says. "There's an area where you should make 60 percent of your shots and I want my team taking half of its shots from there."

"Defensively, you should start your defense with the last phase of your offense. If you execute your offense properly, you'll always have people in position to stop the other team's fast break."

Motta had a reputation during his eight turbulent years with the Chicago Bulls (356–300) as an advocate of pattern basketball, but he proved in his two years with the Bullets (92–72) that he knows the running game as well.

"Your offense should never interfere with the basic ability of your players," the coach says. "You should never choke a player's ability and you must adapt to your personnel."

Motta used this same philosophy to lead Weber State to three Big Sky Conference championships. In his six years at the Utah school, his teams posted a 122–31 record.

Motta's teams in Chicago were a reflection of his personality when he came into the league in 1968: aggressive, determined, deliberate and, yes, arrogant. The Bulls scrapped and battled their way to four straight 50-victory seasons, but at the end, collapsed amidst personality conflicts and contractual hassles.

The coach now is content to leave the administrative work to others and concentrate strictly coaching. If his first two years in Washington are any indication he should outlast most White House administrations.

The 47-year-old Motta lives in Gambrills, Md., with his wife Janice and their children, Kip (19), Jodi (16) and Kirt (10). During the summer months, the family returns to Idaho where they have a partnership in a trout farm near the tiny town of Fish Haven.

Bernie Bickerstaff

Assistant Coach
and Scout

Dick Motta has made a lot of intelligent decisions since taking over as coach of the Washington Bullets, but when asked what his best move was, he says there is no doubt.

"The single most important decision I've made as coach of the Bullets was hiring Bernie Bickerstaff," Motta told a Touchdown Club luncheon audience when the administrative staff was honored there last summer.

Motta and Bickerstaff enjoy a rare quality of mutual respect, excellent rapport and a willingness to accept the other's ideas.

"I feel completely confident leaving a game in Bernie's hands if I get thrown out," Motta said. "If I didn't think he was capable of coaching the team I wouldn't have him working for me."

After serving as a Bullets' assistant for five years, Bickerstaff has earned the respect of players throughout the league and recently has been mentioned as a candidate for head jobs.

"Bernie has as good a knowledge of the game as anyone I've played under," said Bob Dandridge, a nine-year veteran. "He also communicates very well with the players."

Bickerstaff began his coaching career at his alma mater, the University of San Diego, at the age of 25. After four seasons, he left a 19-9 team to follow his friend, K.C. Jones to Washington and become the youngest assistant in the NBA.

It is rare when a head coach's contract is not renewed and his assistant is asked to stay, but that's what happened when Motta arrived in the summer of 1976.

A native of Benham, Ky., Bickerstaff was a point guard at San Diego and turned down an offer to play with the Harlem Globetrotters to become an assistant coach at his alma mater.

The 34-year-old Bickerstaff and his wife, Eugenia, live in Columbia, Md., with their daughters, Robin (13) and Cydni(10) and son Bernard (3).

John Lally, Trainer

John Lally became the Bullets' trainer in March, 1976, taking over for the late Bill Ford. Until a couple years ago, the 35-year-old Lally had been a Texan all the way. He is a 1965 alumnus of Texas Christian where he worked as a student trainer. He trained in the Chicago Cubs' organization—at Dallas-Ft. Worth and San Antonio—from 1965 through 1968, when he joined the Dallas Chaparrals of the ABA. He stayed with the Chaparrals until 1972. Lally was out of basketball until 1974-75 when he joined the Memphis Sounds and the ill-fated Baltimore Claws (in 1975). Married over the summer, he resides with his wife Karen and their 8-year-old daughter, Kara, in Bowie, Md.

Chip Reed, Director of Marketing

Now in his ninth season with the Bullets, Chip Reed was given additional responsibility last year and elevated from Director of Sales and Promotions to being in charge of the entire Bullets' marketing program. In addition to his former responsibilities, he is also in charge of the team's group sales and handles its advertising. Reed is a graduate of Towson State College and taught school for two years in Baltimore County prior to joining the Bullets. The 33-year-old Reed and his wife, Debbie, live in Millersville, Md.

Mark Pray Director of Public Relations

Mark Pray, former Sports Information Director at the University of Arkansas at Little Rock, begins his first season as the Bullets' public relations director. The 28-year-old Kansas native replaces Marc Splaver who died of leukemia this past May. Pray earned a journalism degree from Kansas State University and also received a Master's degree from the innovative Sports Administration Program at Ohio University. Prior to going to Arkansas, he served in public relations' capacities in minor league baseball and with the Baltimore Colts. Pray is single and resides in Upper Marlboro, Md.

Hyman Perlo, Cal Sperling

RING THE BELL TV on Archive.org

Hyman Perlo
Director of Community Relations

As Director of Community Relations, Hyman Perlo is responsible for developing community oriented programs for the youth of the metropolitan Washington area. Emphasis is put on children in special education programs and hospitalized veterans. He is also in charge of the Bullets' Wives Club, the team's speakers bureau and running the summer clinic program. The 56-year-old Perlo receives as much fan mail as any player and has received numerous commendations for his efforts. After an outstanding basketball career at Washington's Roosevelt High School, Hymie received nearly 50 college scholarship offers but turned them down to join the Army. While serving with the 509th Paratroop Infantry Battalion in World War II, he earned the Silver Star and Purple Heart. A leg injury suffered then ended a possible basketball career and Perlo returned to his native Washington and obtained a degree from George Washington University. He and his wife, Edith, live in Kensington, Md. They have two daughters, Lisa and Carla.

Sperling

Cal Sperling, Comptroller

On March 1, when the NBA season is just beginning its stretch run, Cal Sperling will celebrate his 29th anniversary as an accountant for the Pollin family. He was named office manager and accountant for Morris Pollin & Sons' construction firm in 1950. He worked in that position until 1968 when Abe Pollin became sole owner of the Bullets. Naturally, he named Sperling as the team's comptroller, a position he has held ever since. The 60-year-old Sperling and wife Mae live in Silver Spring, Md. They have a son, David (27).

45 Phil Chenier

6-3 180 Guard
College: California '72
High School: Berkeley (CA)

Birthplace: Berkeley, California
Birthdate: October 30, 1950

Residence: Columbia, Md.

Wife: Paula

Children: April (7), Phillip (5), Adele (3)

How Chenier became a Bullet: Drafted on first round of "hardship" draft in 1971.

PROFILE: Fluid player with classic jump shot ... great jumper ... extremely quick hands ... exceptional moving without the ball ... good defensive player—quick enough to cover small guards but has size to play with taller ones ... former coach K.C. Jones said he was the best he had seen cutting off the passing lanes since Jerry West.

LAST SEASON: Had flareup of back problems the week before training camp opened ... didn't start first game until December 20 ... only seven games later, he suffered a hamstring pull and back problems reoccurred ... played in only 36 games and last saw action on January 8 ... despite limited playing time, averaged 14.1 points per game ... had surgery on September 1 ... found to have a ruptured disc in the lower back and evidence of pressure on a nerve root ... operation was termed a success, but when he will return to action is unknown.

CAREER: After being a hardship draft choice, became a starter before what would have been his senior year in college ... three time All-Star selection ... playoff free throw percentage of .863 is third best of all-time ... holds Bullets' record for most steals in a season (176) and steals per game (2.3) ... career high of 53 against Portland (12-72) was most points scored in a NBA game that seasons.

10 Bob Dandridge

6-6 204 Forward

College: Norfolk State '69
High School: Maggie Walker (Richmond)

Birthplace: Richmond
Birthdate: November 15, 1947

Residence: Alexandria, Va.

Wife: Barbara

Children: Shana (3)

How Dandridge became a Bullet: Signed as free agent August 17, 1977

PROFILE: The best small forward to ever play for the Bullets . . . the NBA standard at his position—others are rated in comparison with him . . . a complete player . . . good passer, excellent shooter, great transition game . . . has tremendous one-on-one ability . . . shoots with a hand in his face as good as anyone . . . plays with orchestration—like a musician, everything is touch and feel . . . gets the job done without being powerful.

LAST SEASON: Was signed specifically to solve Bullets' small forward problems and help bring a championship to Washington . . . did just that . . . team's most consistent scorer, failing to hit double figures just four times . . . ended season as Bullets' number two scorer . . . scored season high of 37 with nine rebounds and seven assists against Chicago (1-26) . . . led club in steals, was second in blocked shots and free throw percentage and third in assists . . . value to the team was apparent in playoffs . . . missed the first game of San Antonio series with a sore neck and Bullets lost and then played the second game and the Bullets won . . . outscored Julius Erving in Eastern Conference Championship as well as playing excellent defense . . . hit for 34 points in game two against Seattle . . . finished playoffs as Bullets number two scorer (21.2 ppg).

CAREER: Scored 13.2 as a rookie and has not scored less than 18.4 since . . . third leading scorer (behind Jabbar and Oscar Robertson) on Milwaukee's 1971 NBA Championship team . . . three time All-Star pick . . . selected on the fourth round by the Bucks after a career at Norfolk State . . . had career high of 40 points against Kansas City on January 23, 1976.

35 Kevin Grevey

6-5 210 Guard

College: Kentucky '75
High School: Taft

Birthplace: Hamilton, Ohio
Birthdate: May 12, 1953

Residence: Crofton, Md.

How Grevey became a Bullet: Drafted on first round in 1975.

PROFILE: Good competitor who is very conscientious ... possesses good speed and quickness ... very good shooter ... excellent jumping ability ... strong rebounder for a guard ... gained confidence and consistency last year.

LAST SEASON: Came into his own after being switched from small forward to guard ... injury to Phil Chenier opened up some playing time and he became one of the better scoring guards in the NBA ... averaged 19.1 points per game after replacing Chenier ... scored consistently in the 15 to 25 point range and then broke loose in March ... recorded a career high 29 against San Antonio on March 1 ... in the very next game (March 3 at Detroit) he scored 32 and on March 10 smashed that best with 43 at Houston ... had 10 rebounds the next night at San Antonio ... played season with variety of injuries—stiff neck, sprained ankle, sore knee and a pulled hamstring—but missed only one game ... scored personal playoff high of 41 points in game two of first-round action against Atlanta.

CAREER: Became a starter at small forward during 1976-77 season ... high school All-American at Taft High in Hamilton, Ohio ... All-American forward at Kentucky ... the school's number two career scorer ...named All-SEC three times and was the Conference's Player of the Year as a sophomore.

11 Elvin Hayes

6-9 235 Forward

College: Houston '68
High School: Britton (La.)

Birthplace: Rayville, La.
Birthdate: November 17, 1945

Residence: Houston, Tex.

Wife: Erna

Children: Elvin Jr. (11), Erna Jr. (6), and Erica (3)

How Hayes became a Bullet: Acquired from Houston for Jack Marin and future considerations, June 23, 1972.

PROFILE: One of the top three or four forwards to ever play the game ... maybe the best big forward in history ... an instinctive hustler ... built to be an athlete ... very fluid and graceful ... great speed and agility for a big man ... excellent at the transition game ... has improved his passing game the last few years.

LAST SEASON: Had the lowest scoring average in his ten year NBA career ... took fewer shots and the result was more balanced team scoring ... had his best rebounding season in four years ... finished third in the league in that category despite being teamed with another great rebounder in Unseld ... averaged 14.5 rebounds over last 39 games with a high of 27 ... pulled down 20 or more in nine games ... had 33 points and 20 rebounds in overtime game at Denver ... blocked 11 shots at Detroit on March 3 and finished tenth in the league in that category ... named to the All-Star team for the tenth time ... led the Bullets in playoff scoring with a 21.8 average and also in rebounding (13.3) ... put to rest the idea that he cannot play under pressure.

CAREER: An All-Star every year in the NBA, an All-American every year at Houston ... has missed only five games in his career ... College Player of the Year in 1967-68 ... scored career high of 54 against Detroit in his rookie year ... only Chamberlain has led league in minutes played more often ... truly a Hall-of-Famer, in addition to holding several club records, he ranks among the top ten all-time NBA leaders in four categories, and has the tenth highest playoff average (23.4) in history.

20 Phil Walker

6-3 180 Guard

College: Millersville (Pa.) '77
High School: Central (Philadelphia)

Birthplace: Philadelphia, Pa.
Birthdate: March 20, 1956

Residence: Philadelphia, Pa.

How Walker became a Bullet: Drafted on second round in 1977.

PROFILE: Might be the best athlete on the team ... strong, fast and quick ... excellent penetrator ... great jumper and a good passer ... played defensive center in college.

LAST SEASON: Had a promising rookie year despite seeing limited action on a veteran team ... started a couple of games due to injuries to other guards ... personal highlight of the season was probably when John Havlicek posted him low, worked to the basket and shot, only to have it blocked ... scored 23 points and had six rebounds, five assists and four steals against Los Angeles on January 20 ... until that time he had only 19 points as a professional to his credit ... ended the season with 26 points, nine assists and nine rebounds in last two games.

CAREER: Scored over 26 points per game both junior and senior years at Millersville ... career total of 2,261 points set school and Pennsylvania Conference marks ... named Conference's Player of the Year after his senior campaign ... earned honorable mention All American honors as a junior and was second-term NCAA College Division All-American as a senior.

How Wright became a Bullet: Drafted on first round in 1976.

PROFILE: Lightning quickness and speed ... slightly built but compensates with other qualities ... has good finish on his drives ... moves equally well to the basket with either left or right hand ... exciting, a crowd pleaser ... enthusiastic ... good middle range shooter ... very active in Bullets' summer clinics until this year when he attended school at Grambling in the offseason.

LAST SEASON: Was a year of peaks and valleys ...scored a career high 43 points on 18 of 20 from the field and had five rebounds and five assists in the third game of the year at Indiana ... sprained his right wrist against New Orleans February 19 ... when it was almost healed, he fell on it after taking a Paul Silas charge ... tried to play despite the injury but was slowed and only scored 13 points in the next 18 games, missing eight completely ... began to regain his old form in final weeks of the season, averaging almost 12 points per contest in the last four games ... had 11 assists versus Chicago on January 26 and led the team in assists per minute played ... was a major factor in the Eastern Conference Finals as he outplayed his Philadelphia counterpart, Lloyd Free.

CAREER: A hardship choice from Grambling ... was one of the two Bullets' first round selections in 1976 (Mitch Kupchak was the other) ... became a starter his rookie season and Bullets' won eight straight ... sidelined with the flu and was replaced in the lineup by Tom Henderson ... All-American at Grambling where he compiled a three-year scoring average of 23.5 points per game.

A Chronological Look at 1977-78

1977

June 10 — Greg Ballard and Bo Ellis selected on first round and Phil Walker on second round of draft.

Aug. 17 — Bob Dandridge signed as free agent.

Sept. 19 — Training camp opens

Oct. 10 — Ellis traded to Denver for first-round pick

Oct. 21 — Bullets open season with 117-109 defeat of Detroit before 13,276 as Mitch Kupchak scores 29 points.

Oct. 22 — Knicks trounce Bullets, 141-115, the most points Bullets are to allow all season.

Oct. 28 — Larry Wright scores career high 43 points, but Pacers top Bullets, 136-127.

Nov. 12 — Bullets prove convincingly they can beat 76ers, 116-98, as Dandridge outplays Dr. J, 28 points to 22, before 18,355.

Nov. 18 — Bullets even record at 6-6 by avenging early loss to Knicks, 123-103, before 17, 242.

Nov. 26-Dec. 4 — Bullets win three at home and two on road (extending road win streak to four) as five-game win streak is longest of season. Record improves to 13-7 as Grevey (career high 25 points in 23 minutes) and Chenier (28 points in 28 minutes) combine for 53 points from shooting guard position. Cleveland win is ninth in 10 games for surging Bullets.

Dec. 11 — After winning 11 of 13, Bullets are shocked at home by Nets, 106-95. Kevin Porter scores 30 points with 17 assists.

Dec. 16 — Bullets deal Denver its first homecourt loss of season as Hayes takes advantage of former Bullet draftee Bo Ellis in overtime, scoring 33 for game.

Dec. 17-20 — Portland, Seattle and LA dim Bullets' optimism by taking three in a row.

Dec. 30 — Bullets end year with 20-13 record by losing to Sixers in Philly, 126-119.

1978

Jan. 3 — David Thompson beats his man and challenges Hayes as clock ticks down to :03, leaps high in the air and banks jumper over E's outstretched fingers, for 101-100 Nugget win.

Jan. 6 — Bullets take out frustrations of Denver loss by largest point production since coming to Washington, 146-114 over Indiana, on .608 shooting.

Jan. 8 — Phil Chenier pulls hamstring at New Jersey as Henderson jumper at buzzer wins, 99-98. This was Chenier's last appearance of season as back problems developed.

Jan. 13 — This is the high point of the season as Bullets top NBA's powerhouse Portland, 102-93, and raise record to 24-15.

Jan. 14 — Start of downward trend, to say the least. Buffalo, of all teams, dishes out 130-93 romp, the worst loss of the season for the Bullets.

Jan. 18 — Henderson sprains ankle, Kupchak injures thumb and Grevey strains neck as Warriors beat Bullets, 113-106.

Jan. 20 — Kupchak reinjures thumb, Grevey pulls hamstring as Lakers rip Bullets, 121-99.

Jan. 22 — Only seven men suit up as Bullets lose to Phoenix, 114-101. Kupchak is sent home to see doctor, Grevey and Henderson are unable to play.

Jan. 24 — Charles Johnson is signed to 10-day contract. Flies in from West Coast and is taken by helicopter from Dulles to Capital Centre parking lot. He arrives 15 minutes before game with Detroit and plays 13 minutes.

Jan. 26 — Decimated Bullets rise to the occasion as Dandridge scores 37 and Unseld holds Gilmore to 11 points and four rebounds as Bullets rout Chicago, 135-107.

Jan. 29 — Again, it's Dandridge (29 points) and Unseld who lead the way as Bullets defeat Lakers, 119-112.

Jan. 31-Feb. 3 — Bullets back on the road and are routed by San Antonio, Cleveland and Boston prior to welcome All-Star break.

Feb. 5 — Elvin Hayes makes 10th All-Star appearance in 10-year career.

Feb. 8 — After fourth straight loss, Bullets surprise Seattle, 106-100, in overtime, then lose to Phoenix and Denver in closing out another disastrous road trip.

Feb. 12 — Hayes passes Kevin Loughery to become Bullets' all-time leading scorer, with 34 points against Phoenix. Problem is that Paul Westphal scores 43 for Suns in 121-109 win.

Feb. 24 — Mitch Kupchak returns early from thumb surgery and helps Bullets to 121-120 overtime win over Phoenix.

Feb. 26 — Hayes scores season-high 37 points as Bullets whip old nemesis Golden State.

Mar. 10 — Bullets win fourth in a row as Kevin Grevey's hot streak reaches its peak with 43 points in 117-114 victory at Houston.

Mar. 11 — San Antonio beats the Bullets, 116-101, to wipe out any realistic hopes of catching the Spurs.

Mar. 17 — Inexplicably, the Bullets lost at home to Indiana, the same team they beat by 32 at Capital Centre earlier in the season.

Mar. 19 — Losing streak reaches three and two at home as Milwaukee whips the Bullets, 105-99. Brian Winters breaks record for assists by visitor, with 18.

Mar. 21 — John Havlicek says goodbye to 17,252 Washington fans by scoring 23 points, but Bullets, behind 34 by Hayes, beat the Celtics, 119-107.

Mar. 25 — Another modest winning streak hits four as Atlanta falls to the Bullets, 98-95.

Mar. 26 — Deja vu. New Jersey wallops the Bullets at home, 118-104. Kevin Porter has 27 points and 13 assists.

Mar. 29 — Guards continue to kill the Bullets as rookie Otis Birdsong's 25 points beat the Bullets in Capital Centre, 108-105.

Mar. 30 — Bullets win third in a row on the road, 123-108, in New York behind 28 by Dandridge and late shooting spurt by CJ and Larry Wright.

Mar. 31 — When will it end? Bullets lose third in a row at home, 102-101, to Cleveland as Foots Walker steals inbounds pass and sprints for winning layup.

Apr. 1 — Kupchak and Knicks' Lonnie Shelton each fined $1,500 for altercation March 30 in New York.

Apr. 2 — Home slump reaches nadir as Knicks are latest to topple Bullets at home, 114-109. Elvin Hayes misses only the fifth game in his 10-year career to attend his grandmother's funeral in Houston.

Apr. 5 — Wes Unseld hits his season high of 25 points, outscoring Abdul-Jabbar, as Bullets overcome .634 shooting by Lakers with 57-29 rebounding average and beat LA, 125-119.

Apr. 6 — Bullets clinch tie for third place in Eastern Conference by beating Boston, 112-103, in Providence. Rookie Greg Ballard is one of the heroes with 15 points, 16 rebounds and seven assists. CJ hits the big shot.

Apr. 9 — Bullets finally clinch third best record in East by beating Philadelphia, 123-113, behind CJ's career-high 29 points.

Apr. 14 — Kevin Grevey scores career playoff high 41 points as Bullets defeat Hawks 107-103 to win preliminary round of playoffs.

Apr. 28 — Bullets committed seven first quarter turnovers but only two the rest of the game as they defeat San Antonio 103-111. Win the semi-final round 4-2 and advance to the Eastern Conference finals against Philadelphia.

May 12 — Wes Unseld tipped in his own missed shot with 12 seconds to go as the Bullets defeat Philadelphia 101-99, take the series 4-2 and earn the right to face Seattle for the NBA Championship.

May 25 — Bullets' history!! Washington wins its first game ever in a Championship series by defeating Seattle 106-98.

Jun. 7 — With 12 seconds remaining in the seventh and deciding game of the Championship, Wes Unseld makes two of three free throws and Bob Dandridge hits a layup to give the Bullets a 105-99 win. The victory breaks Seattle's homecourt winning streak at 22. Washington claims the 1978 NBA World Champions.

Semifinals

Game 1 — April 16, 1978

SAN ANTONIO—Again Bob Dandridge is sidelined and replaced by Mitch Kupchak ... behind the scoring and rebounding of a Hayes, Unseld and Kupchak front line, Bullets led 29-25 at the end of one quarter and 49-48 at halftime ... George Gervin took over for the Spurs in the third quarter canning eight straight shots, including five in the first three minutes ... this along with eight Bullets' turnovers in the third period allowed San Antonio to take control of the game ... Bullets won battle of the boards 58-48, but lost the game 114-103.
Washington leaders: Hayes 26 points, 15 rebounds and 6 assists
San Antonio leaders: Gervin 35 points, Kenon 9 rebounds, Gervin and Kenon 5 assists

Game 3 — April 21, 1978

LANDOVER—With the series tied 1-1, action moved to the Capital Centre . . . Bullets took charge early behind the play of Bob Dandridge . . . Kevin Grevey, trying to hold down George Gervin, picked up third foul after only seven minutes of play and was replaced by Charles Johnson . . . Johnson scored three straight baskets to give the Bullets a 38-26 lead at the quarter's end . . . Elvin Hayes padded the Bullets' lead by scoring 10 points in a six minute span and put Washington on top 59-40 . . . Spurs scored 10 of last 14 points to trail at the half, 63-50 . . . third quarter ended in a 19 point Bullets' lead despite 10 points by Larry Kenon . . . Spurs made last minute bid, again behind Kenon, as they cut the deficit to 13 (101-88) . . . the Bullets play in the first three quarters proved to be too much as they were victorious, 118-105 and took a 2-1 series lead.

Washington leaders: Dandridge 28 points, Hayes 12 rebounds, Unseld 8 assists.

San Antonio leaders: Kenon 37 points, 9 rebounds and 4 assists

Game 4 — April 23, 1978

LANDOVER—San Antonio coach Doug Moe went to patterned offense and replaced Coby Dietrick with Mike Green in starting lineup . . . strategy seemed to confuse Bullets as Spurs led until last minute of the game . . . with San Antonio leading 93-90 and the clock at 1:30, Hayes put in a tip to close within one . . . Dick Motta, with some strategy of his own, switched Bob Dandridge onto George Gervin . . . after the Iceman missed an off-balance shot, Larry Wright score on a fastbreak layup and was fouled by Louie Dampier . . . Wright missed free throw and Billy Paultz fouled by Hayes . . . hit both giving the Spurs a 95-94 lead . . . Hayes scored on a lob pass from Wright and Bullets regained lead . . . Gervin's 10 foot jumper after a time out blocked by Hayes, rebounded by Dandridge and Wright fouled with 11 seconds . . . connected on both for winning margin.

Washington leaders: Dandridge 24 points, Hayes 13 rebounds, Dandridge 8 assists.

San Antonio leaders: Gervin 35 points, Paultz 8 rebounds, Gale 7 assists

EASTERN CONFERENCE CHAMPIONSHIP

Game 1 — April 30, 1978

PHILADELPHIA—The first game of the Eastern Conference finals saw the Bullets coming to town after a tough San Antonio series...the Sixers had had a week off, after easily defeating the Knicks in the semi-finals, 4-0 ... the two teams played even and at halftime the score was tied, 47-47...the Bullets led by four with only 9 seconds to go but a controversial jump ball call and a basket by Dough Collins sent the game into overtime...Washington responded by scoring the first six points of the overtime on Bob Dandridge's jumper, a rebound basket by Elvin Hayes and two foul shots...after Philly had come back to within two, Hayes took over scoring the Bullets last seven points ... in all he had 13 points, 3 rebounds and a blocked shot in the overtime ... Washington wins 122-117, but the victory is somewhat tarnished—Wes Unseld sprained his ankle in the final minutes of the game.
Washington leaders: Hayes 28 points and 18 rebounds, Henderson 9 assists.
Philadelphia leaders: Erving 25 points, McGinnis 15 rebounds, Bibby Mix and Free 5 assists.

Game 2 — May 3, 1978

PHILADELPHIA—Wes Unseld declared out for the game and replaced by Mitch Kupchak ... after see-saw first quarter, the Bullets built up a 10 point lead late in the second period ... Sixers' Darryl Dawkins blocked two Kupchak shots and the Bullets threw the ball away twice as Philly ran off a 10-2 streak and pulled within two (54-52) at the half ... Julius Erving scored seven as the 76ers hit the first nine points of the third quarter ... Bullets managed to close to within one point late in the quarter, but Philadelphia broke off a series of fast breaks to go up by 10, 88-78 ... from that point the game was theirs ... in a contest marred by rough play, Kevin Grevey aggravated a sore neck and, along with Unseld, was expected to miss game three.
Washington leaders: Hayes 26 points and 15 rebounds, Henderson and Wright 8 assists
Philadelphia leaders: Collins 28 points, Erving and Dawkins 11 rebounds, Bibby 9 assists

CHAMPIONSHIP SERIES

Game 1 — May 21, 1978

SEATTLE—The Bullets dominated play for three quarters and Seattle's home court winning streak of 21 straight seemed in jeopardy ... the 4th quarter was another story however ... behind Fred Brown (16 fourth quarter points), the Sonics outscored the Bullets 19-2 in a six minute period to close within two at 86-84 ... Sonics outscored Bullets 33-18 in final quarter and won game one of the championship series ... keys to the victory were 30 points by Brown and John Johnson holding Bob Dandridge to only six ...

Att: 19,035. Technicals: Dandridge. Officials: O'Donnell, Gushue.

Game 3 — May 28, 1978

LANDOVER—The game was close the entire way as neither team could take command . . . the teams were separated by no more than two points at the end of any period . . . guard play proved the difference. . .Sonics' Dennis Johnson had an outstanding defensive game blocking seven shots as the Bullets' back court men connected on only nine of 45 from the field . . . Seattle hangs on for a 93-92 win handing the Bullets their first 1978 playoff loss at home and their first Capital Centre defeat of the season before a crowd of 12,000 or more.

Game 5 — June 2, 1978

SEATTLE—Sonics led most of the game as Fred Brown hit 11 of his first 15 shots and scored 26 points in as many minutes of play . . . the Bullets had late rallies but inconsistency and the inability to hit free throws proved their downfall. . . Seattle connected on 26 of 31 free throws, while the Bullets could manage only 18 of 31 . . . Sonics score 22nd straight win in the Coliseum as Washington goes down to defeat, 98-94.

Game 7 — June 7, 1978

SEATTLE—All the marbles were on the line ... Seattle had not lost in the Coliseum in 22 tries ... the lead changed hands nine times in the first quarter, but the Bullets were never behind in the second and led at halftime, 53-45 ... the Sonics closed to within five in the third period but a 55 foot shot by Charles Johnson at the buzzer gave the Bullets an 79-65 advantage heading into the final quarter of the series ... Sonics rally in the fourth but with 12 seconds remaining, Wes Unseld is fouled in a penalty situation ... he misses the first and makes the second ... Unseld comes back to can the third ... Bob Dandridge scores a layup with three seconds to go ... it's all over ... the Bullets win 105-99 and are crowned the 1978 NBA World Champions.

The Capital Centre . . .

capital centre

Three years after Abe Pollin lifted the first shovelful of dirt from that Landover, Md. soybean field, Capital Centre became the largest grossing concert hall in America. Now, after five years of operation, it has staged more than twelve hundred events, hosted more than 12 million guests, and been visited by every recognizable name in the music industry from the Rolling Stones to the Mormon Tabernacle Choir.

Media Information

CREDENTIALS

Members of the working press should notify the Public Relations office at least 30 hours in advance (Friday noon for weekend games) of games you wish to cover. If you do not have a Bullets' pass, a single game pass will be left for you at the press entrance which is located just south of the Capital quadrant. Only the working media are allowed on press row. Parking is available upon request.

PRESS ROOM

The press room is located adjacent to the press entrance and opposite Portal 5 on the concourse level. It will be open two hours prior to game time and close when the last reporter leaves. Food and beverages are served before each game.

LOCKER ROOM

The locker room will be open to the press until 45 minutes before tip-off and no later than 10 minutes after the conclusion of the game. Please do not go into the locker room unless you are working on a story. This will relieve congestion and make interviews easier for those who are filing.

SERVICES

The following services will be provided: NBA standings and current schedule, cumulative statistics for both teams, notes of both human and statistical interest, Bullets' game-by-game results, highs and lows, running score and individual leaders for each quarter and halftime and final boxes. Should you need the use of telecopier service, please make your own arrangements.

Bullets Television

Bullets' basketball will again be shown on WDCA-TV this season. A lineup of 20 regular season away games has been scheduled and will be shown live and in their entirety.

Jim Karvellas, who did the play-by-play for Channel 20 during last year's playoff, will again be back in the booth. Karvellas has a long and varied association with the Bullets' franchise. He began as the public address announcer for the then Chicago Packers in 1961, the club's first year of operation. The following season, he became the team's play-by-play man and continued in that capacity when the club moved to Baltimore. In 1973 Karvellas resigned from his duties with the Bullets to join the sports staff of WTTG-TV. In addition to doing the Bullets' telecasts, he will also do regional games for CBS this year.

Handling the color commentary for the second year will be one of the most popular Bullets of all-time, Mike Riordan. Riordan retired following the 1976-77 season and now devotes full time to his restaurant in Annapolis.

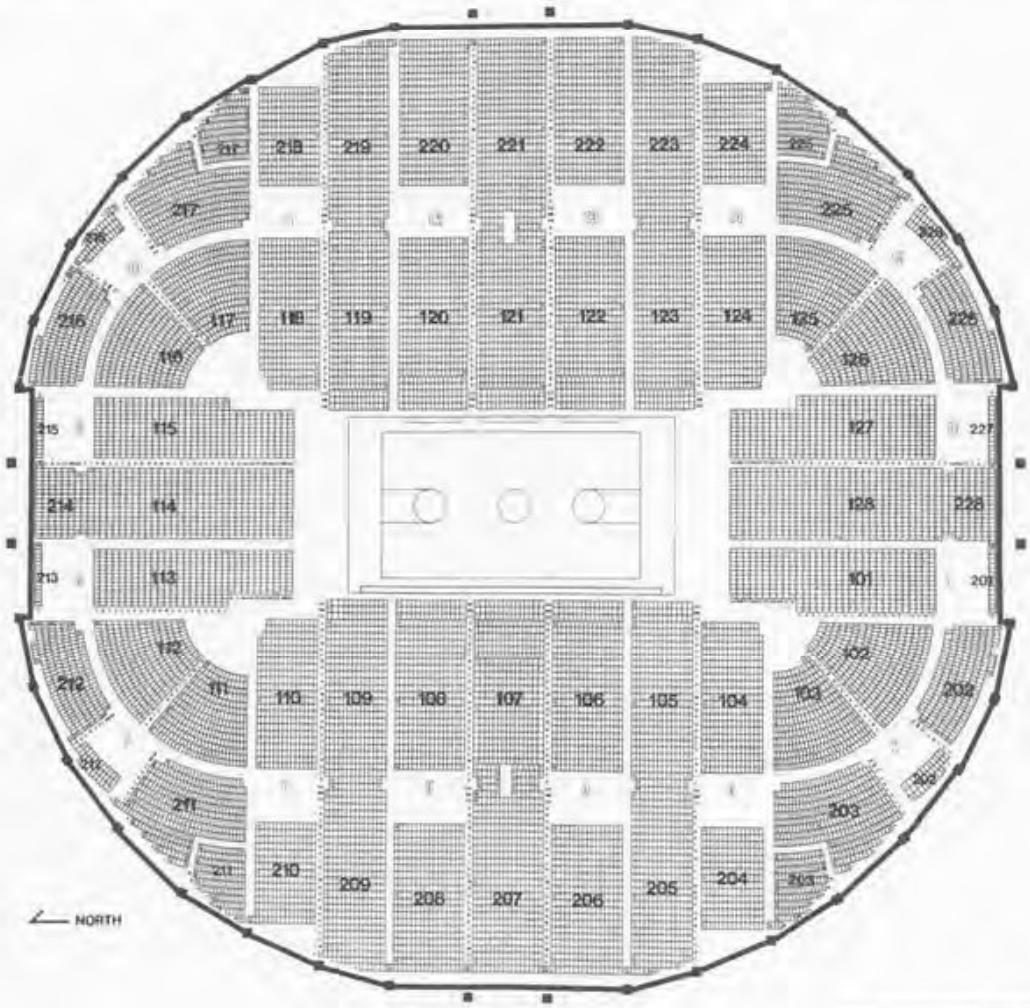
Capital Ticket Centre

Capital Centre has its own unique system, known as the Capital Ticket Centre. Tickets purchased at any of Hecht Co. department stores; at 18th & K Sts., N.W.; the Pentagon Ticket Service and any Capital Centre ticket window will draw from a pool of every unsold seat in the arena.

Those who want to be certain of having good seats for every game and be guaranteed the opportunity to purchase Playoff tickets may apply for season tickets (350-3400).

Individual tickets for regular-season games are $9, $7, and $4.



Bullets on the Air

WTOP, Radio 15, will broadcast Bullets' games for the fourth consecutive year. Mel Proctor, who replaced Frank Herzog as WTOP's sports director, will handle both home and away games. Proctor comes to Washington after having served as the sports director of KGMB-TV and Radio in Honolulu for the past five years.
